Oregon Training Series on Direct Supports

The Oregon DD Coalition is pleased to bring you the 2009 Oregon Trainings Series on Direct Supports, which is hosted by the DD Coalition with funds from the Oregon Department of Human Services, Seniors & People with Disabilities Division.

This series of trainings is targeted to direct support providers and related professionals who support individuals with developmental disabilities. The purpose of the series is to motivate, instruct, network, problem-solve and share best practice. The change of format is intended to increase the coalition's capacity to train many more individuals than is possible through a single annual conference.

The series will be delivering four-hour live teleconferences to a network of host sites throughout the state for the benefit of direct support providers. In addition to featuring nationally-recognized speakers, each remote site will also have a facilitator who will lead the local group in structured activities and discussions.

We invite you to attend training series that is focused around providing supports in ways that not only enhance the lives of the people you are working for, but also enhance your own life. When a direct support provider is secure, skilled, and happy, support is more successful. Our goal is to help you achieve this condition.

Presenting
Debra McLean
April 30, 2009

Debra Mclean is passionate about seeing all people obtain employment. She has been intrigued with community building and person centered planning as a way to see individuals with a variety of support needs, succeed in jobs that fit them since 1981.

She has worked for the University of Oregon and Oregon Health Sciences University on a number of projects involving people with disabilities and employment. She provides training and consultation on employment and person-centered planning in Washington and Oregon.

She has also taught classes on these topics at Portland State University in the Teacher Education Program. Currently she works for both Oregon Technical Assistance Corporation and Asai and Associates. She has worked with schools, families, agencies and individuals throughout the U.S. and Australia.
